The secrets to whipping up a dish are not unlike those when producing a music anthology, you must blend seemingly different and mutually exclusive elements into a delicate balance which firmly links them together, thus igniting the magic that stimulates taste buds and auditory senses, and luring many back again and again. Located in Shanghai, the well-known Thai restaurant "Lapis Thai" upholds this essence by integrating Chinese food culture into its Thai cuisine. This applies to the anthology bearing the same name as well, which once again stirs up a musical spark that casts the perfect enchantment spell. This year, as Lapis Thai settles into Shanghai Portman Mall in style, the anthology of the same name shall once again serve an auditory feast brimming in color and flavor. In addition to having old favorites like Club des Belugas and De-Phazz lead the lounge line-up, joining us will be London's Belleruche, Electro-Swing guru Parov Stelar and Austria's Zeebee, who has been touted as Billy Holiday 2.0. Boasting surprising elements derived from neo soul, acid jazz and even underground hip hop, their slow beats will refresh and hypnotize the mind. Immerse yourself in the works of English reggae queen Alice Russell, who has worked with the likes of David Byrne and Fatboy Slim, the timeless and soulful voice of Motown legend Willie Hutch, the dazzling sparks created from the fusion of downtempo and hip hop by Korean American Kero One, the poignant trip hop numbers of Ninja Tune's Stateless, the brilliance of Thomas Siffing Trio's Cruisen (Jelly Jam Highsteppin' Remix) drum'n'bass beats, and Brazilian singer-songwriter Seu Jorge's wonderful cover of Soul/Funk maestro Roy Ayers' masterpiece. With its vivid and vibrant notes, Lapis Thai 3 is undoubtedly the perfect feast that will match your finicky musical taste and appetite.
